

Re-Husark

Hus Park is a kind of imaginary gateway to the city of Tabor thanks to the adjacent train and bus transport, located next to the historical centre. It thus fulfils not only the function of a park, but also of a forecourt representing the city. The place is facing a lot of dissatisfaction from the citizens due to its untidy condition caused by the outdated green space design. This makes the visitor feel unsafe in the park, which is supported by the concentration of less considerate citizens along with child gangs. Therefore, with my proposal I am trying to make the park a presentable space; motivating for people and above all safe and clear.

Pre-tank space

Space replacing the square, representative appearance with a monument, water mist, and other equipment

Monument

Artistic object with built-in bottle and can returning machine

Altan

Altan, where you can organize a small event unannounced

Moral sentences

A lane running through the park that offers reflection

Recreational zone

All residence lawn and mlat

Transit zone

The pavement marks a transit zone, following the type of the surrounding designs

Playground for teenagers

unusual entertainment not only for children

Recreation zone

Soft surface marks the place for recreation

* Freedom is the most valuable thing

* When you behave dishonestly, you ignite a spark of mistrust

* We want to be happy even if we live in a way that doesn't make us happy

* If we ask ourselves, the worst case scenario is that we recognize ourselves

* If you live by your best judgment, you will never die

* Your internal value is created through the experience

* The question of why is the most powerful tool we knowingly control

Look at yourself through the eyes of your little self

Concept

The concept is based on the aforementioned issue of feeling unsafe due to the cluttered planting and the socially less able citizens who find refuge there. The main idea connecting my thoughts on how to address this issue is to strive for an adequately designed space for all social groups that will motivate us to behave considerably towards others and perhaps uplift our souls?

I am trying to open up the park overall to the new needs of society. Whether it is by connecting the streets to the park, giving the surrounding businesses the opportunity to take advantage of the space, or by reorganizing the traffic and adding a desirable human scale, aiding safe permeability. I have imaginatively divided the place into a passable part and a recreational part, which will be used by people waiting for their connection, or by the aforementioned groups, which I motivate financially here with an artistic element that incorporates a bottle or can return machine. There is also a playground primarily for the teenage population from the adjacent schools or a gazebo that encourages entrepreneurship and creativity among the locals. A concrete strip running the entire length of the park is an essential element. It welcomes all who pass through or spend time here. It is filled with basic moral values that one can contemplate and thus support the truth for which Jan Hus fought.
